Sony Music Entertainment - Milan Records
Los Angeles, CA

Dear Milan Records and Sony Soundtracks Team,

Soundtracks are the part of music that I have always been most fascinated by. Not because they are different from other music, but because of the relationship they have to something else, a scene, a character, a moment that the music makes permanent in a way the visuals alone could not. Milan Records occupies a very specific place in that world, and the Specialist, Soundtracks Production role is the closest thing I have seen to a role that sits exactly at that intersection professionally.

My background spans sync licensing, music supervision, and content operations, work that lives at the same intersection. At Position Music, I cataloged over 200 TV, film, trailer, and advertising placements, built and categorized DISCO playlists against creative briefs, and tracked catalog metadata and distribution across multiple DSPs. At Shades Collective, I served as music supervisor on a 10-episode podcast, collecting music selections from international artists and coordinating all logistics around music assets and credits from pre-production through delivery. At Carnegie Mellon's Arts Management and Technology Lab, I managed a 16-episode content pipeline across multiple platforms, including analyzing audience performance data across Spotify and Apple Music and restructuring our content format based on what the numbers told us. That combination of music industry knowledge and digital operations experience -- collecting assets from composers and licensors, coordinating across platforms, tracking what's live and what's missing -- is the day-to-day of this role.

The digital marketing operations side of this role, email campaigns, VEVO and YouTube channel management, safelisting, UGC audio links, includes tools I am still building hands-on experience with outside of my DSP and metadata work. I want to name that directly. What I bring instead is a demonstrated ability to ramp up quickly on new platforms, a genuine and deep interest in soundtracks specifically, and a coordination and communication track record that transfers directly to the stakeholder management this role requires.

I would genuinely love the opportunity to bring my background in sync licensing and music operations into a role centered entirely on the music I care most about. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Jabreneé Hussie
